[illegible]

MONDAY MORNING, JUNE [illegible] 186[illegible]

Phases in the Movements of Politicians

When Gen. Lane returned to Oregon he announced the support of [illegible] session State [illegible] This was many months since. His policy was to [illegible] silent in this [illegible] except to a few confidential friends [illegible] as soon as he left the community the [illegible] of seeking to [illegible] press upon the minds of [illegible] friends the justice of the rebellion and the certainty of its success. Both [illegible] he left the county [illegible] called Jeff Davis' army our army [illegible] that his son was in our army [illegible] and he [illegible] the fact in all his intercourse with the people that his entire sympathies were with the rebellion. His course was cautious, but it [illegible] manifest that there was an organized party in this State, whose aim, as Gen. Lane expressed it, was to place Oregon on the platform of the Confederate States. [illegible] was one of his mouth pieces, and we could if we chose give the names of men who [illegible] him and talked as he did [illegible] scattered over the State. They organized [illegible] presses to act with them speaking the same sentiments with themselves, and [illegible] at the same [illegible] We all recollect that the [illegible] until the appearance of Gen. Lane studiously avoided committing itself on the great question of rebellion, but so soon as the editor [illegible] met Gen. Lane in Portland and had been [illegible] acquainted as is presumed, with his object and the plans to effect them, it suddenly abandoned its non-committal policy, and in its opposition to Government and its sympathy with rebellion, followed precisely in the track of the Nashville [illegible] and other known and acknowledged [illegible] sheets, most of which have since been denied the use of the Government mails for their distribution. [illegible] long the editor of the Corvallis Union was not sufficiently subservient to the [illegible] project—and we all know [illegible] subserviency—was displaced, and [illegible] a political renegade, a creature of [illegible] entirely unscrupulous, was given his position and well did he do the bidding of his masters. The Oregon Democrat, a paper with [illegible] —not shrewd enough to cover its treason, blasted out its hostility to Government and its rejoicings over the defeat of the Federal arms. The Jacksonville Gazette, under O'Meara, was vindictive in its hostility to the Union— [illegible] out Breckenridge [illegible] the country that had given him all his prominence as a [illegible], and insisted that Jeff Davis and his colleagues should have their way in breaking up the Government. Does any man doubt that the managers of these presses had an understanding and a common purpose—and that purpose to advocate the interests and success of the rebellion? Does any man believe that there was not an organization from one extent of the State to the other, which sustained these rebel papers and intended through their influence [illegible] their own exertions to carry out the views of Joe Lane and his confederates?

In our opinion that man who [illegible] believes otherwise must have given slight attention to the events and history of the past few months.

The prob[illegible] union of the friends of the Union a few days before the meeting of the Convention at Eugene, and the proceedings of that Convention [illegible] the [illegible] party with the apprehension that the people with their then avowed political doctrines were not likely to go with them and that they must adopt a new [illegible] they would [illegible] Oregon beyond hope. Hence [illegible] Convention at Corvallis, when they [illegible] resolutions which entirely [illegible] manufacture the platform [illegible] explained by different [illegible] Union men as a Union platform [illegible] a rebel platform. We venture to say that no honest man [illegible] this state [illegible] character of the platform [illegible] by the Corvallis [illegible] ticket of that Convention [illegible] [illegible] taxes in support [illegible] upon the rebels [illegible] until they were [illegible]

All this is history [illegible] [illegible] deeply sym[illegible] [illegible] honest conviction [illegible] stated them before and we repeat them here.

OLD, AND GOT THE MONEY."—A good was played on the proprietor of a first hotel, in this city, on Saturday morning by a sharp customer who professed to just returned from Cariboo with a full of "rocks," and very confidentially de the same with the proprietor for safe ing. The proprietor, no doubt feeling flattered by the trust reposed in his ty, securely locked the purse in his safe, s a matter of course felt quite safe in ultimate profits to be realized from that er's custom. The lucky boarder lounged gentlemanly ease and elegant leisure town for several days, appeared regu at meal hours and was helped to the best house afforded, and at night reposing his frame upon soft beds, between clean s, in a first floor room well ventilated carpeted, and upon rising each morning the satisfaction of finding clean linen and pure wholesome water, combs, s, cologne, etc., etc., all in luxuriant for his free use in performing his morn ablution; in fact, he lived in grand style htoned and elegant, magnificent and A After having enjoyed the hospitality good cheer of this house for several days, accidentally running short of loose change, andly called upon the "bar-keep," who itatingly shelled out a couple of "twen to accommodate this first class board s it was known that the purse on deposit ined at least as many ounces. Saturday ing came, and the Proprietor happened op down on the wharf to witness the de re of the ocean steamer for San Fran when what was his astonishment upon lding his confidential and wealthy board omenading the upper deck of the ship as eamed away from the wharf, apparent ol and collected, and evincing no desire ever to remain longer in the city or call his "dust." The proprietor, thinking something was wrong, hastily returned bar, opened the safe and took out the which had remained as he had deposited eral days before. But, oh, horror of astonishment doubly astounded cast stly shades over the landlord's hitherto countenance, when on untying the string upturning the purse, what should come but a double handful of shot—real shot," mixed with sand! The land ust have felt as though he had been could have shot that customer without the least compunction of conscience; e can further confidentially add that he ermined to shoot the next fellow that akes to sell him with "Cariboo dust."

VIEW AT CAMP CLACKAMAS.—Col. Stein commanding the military district of accompanied by Majors Lugenbeel, and Francis, Capt. Hopkins, Lieut. and Dr. Hager, and a few invited ns, proceeded on board the steamer ncer on Saturday morning last, to the amas county Fair Grounds, where there present encamped three and a half com of Volunteers, belonging to the Oregon lry, respectively commanded as follows: pany A, Captain T. S. Harris; Company aptain D. S. Truax; Company F, Capt. Mathews, and a detachment of Com C, commanded by Lieutenant White, the whole under the command of Lieut. ey and Major Rinearson, for the purpose ially examining and reviewing the camp its officers and regulations. Shortly after ing at the camp, the Board of Examin consisting of Majors Lugenbeel and Fran and Dr. Hager, interrogated the commis d officers of the battalion, mainly upon loyalty to the Government, and then ad tered the oath of office. In the mean the Colonel and the other officers exam the quarters. After this, a collation of things was served round, and all partook fully of the hospitality, your reporter especial justice to the "claret" and invigorating cordials. After lunch, all ompanies were drawn up for review, and went through all the military evolutions presence of the Colonel and staff and a num of ladies from Oregon City. The review ing passed off with entire satisfaction to Colonel and his staff, and with credit to officers and men of the companies, the y again returned to the steamer and de ted, amid long and loud cheering, the ing of the band and a general good feel all around. Upon arriving at Portland, steamer stopped for about an hour, and officers and guests again regaled them s upon the good cheer offered at the Me lis, after which they went on their way ing, and no doubt returned to Vancou their headquarters, well pleased with day's visit.

OAT RACE.—A boat race occurred between steamers Vancouver and Rival, on Satur evening last, as the former was returning an excursion to the Clackamas Volunteer . The Rival, overtaking the Vancouver Milwaukie, when bets were pretty freely de upon each side which would pass Knott's harf first. The race resulted in the Van ver beating her Rival at least her full gth.

A STAR TROUPE.—We have been creditably rmed that Mr. J. S. Potter, who departed San Francisco on the Sierra Nevada, in nds making arrangements for a "Star pe" of dramatic actors and actresses for opening of the Theater in this city in the l and the entertainment of our citizens uring the fall and winter.

FURNITURE, CARPETS, &c.—Our readers cannot fail to notice the new advertisement of Walter Bros., in this morning's paper, in which they announce that they have just opened the most extensive warehouse this side of San Francisco, with the largest and best selected stock of household furniture, carpets, oil-cloths, window shades, and in fact, everything belonging to the house furnishing and upholstery line, which they offer at the lowest San Francisco wholesale prices. We hesitate not in stating that they can offer superior advantages to purchasers above any other establishment of the kind in the city. Call and see them, corner First and Stark streets.

STILL FALLING.—The Willamette river is still gradually falling, having gone down four and seven-eighth inches from 10 o'clock, P. M., Friday last, till 10, P. M., last night. We have been indebted to Mr. Charles Woodward of Hodge & Calef's Drug Store, for the correct measurement of the rise and fall of the water, taken from a convenient place in which no mistake could occur.

☞ Coughs.—The sudden changes of our climate are sources of PULMONARY, BRONCHIAL and ASTHMATIC AFFECTIONS. Experience having proved that simple remedies often act speedily and certainly when taken in the early stages of the disease, recourse should at once be had to "Brown's Bronchial Troches," or Lozenges, let the Cold, Cough, or Irritation of the Throat be ever so slight, as by this precaution a more serious attack may be effectually warded off. Public Speakers and Singers will find them effectual for clearing and strengthening the voice. See advertisement.

"Look to the cattle, or we'll all be ruined out, by thunder," shouted Kit, as we caught up our rifles. His warning was just in time. No white man's horse can brook the Indian whoop, and all those of ours that had hitherto been grazing quietly about, with the lariats dragging, galloped wildly over the prairie in full stampede, and were irrevocably lost.—Only three horses remained to us. They had luckily, a short time before, been hitched up to a tree near at hand. Before these terrified brutes could break away we had sprung to their heads and effectually secured them by doubling their lassos. At first, panic-struck by the appalling sight I had just witnessed, and the critical position in which we were placed, I entertained the idea of flinging myself on to the back of one of the horses and flying for my life, but the hunter restrained me. "Do as I do, mate," he said, with an admirable coolness that completely reassured me, and in obedience to his example, I took cover behind the horses and leveled my rifle across their backs, point-blank at the approaching rout of redskins. These, who were armed chiefly with bows and arrows, observing our demonstrations, and knowing that we were not to be taken by surprise or without a certain loss to themselves—conditions utterly opposed to all Indian ideas of warfare—gradually faltered in their pace till they came to a stand-still, and then broke and fled back to the cover of the creek in great confusion.

There being now breathing time, I remembered the artist. Strange to say he was nowhere to be seen, but Kit, who seemed to divine the reason of my puzzled looks, pointed up the tree beneath which we stood. I looked aloft, and dimly amid the foliage of the cedar I descried a dangling pair of bluchers that seemed familiar to me. They were the artist's. "Come down!" I shouted; "the Indians are gone." But my request met with no responce, unless an irritable movement of the dangling boots was ment for a negative. Again I hailed them, when, as if to put an end to all further argument, they ascended higher among the branches, and were lost to sight. "Guess the scared critter's best up the cedar," said Kit, adding suddenly, as he glanced over the prairie, "Hurrah! Now, mate, saddle up right smart." And while I rapidly equipped the horses, to my astonishment, he busied himself in casting upon the fire all the property lying about the camp, with the sole exception of our own rifles and revolvers. "If you varmint get us, they'll only git mean plunder," he said, grimly contemplating his work of destruction.

"The Indians in the creek, you mean?" I asked.

The hunter shook his head and pointed southwards.

Following the direction of his arm, I made out through the fast fading twilight a band of horsemen galloping right down upon us.—They were a band of Indians. As, doubtless, they were acting in concert with those on foot in the creek, it was plain that our position was no longer tenable. I perceived that Kit was of this opinion, for he was now hastily examining our three remaining horses. They were young American cattle that I had bought on the Columbia as a speculation for the California market. Two of them were weedy-looking fillies; but the third, a powerfully made chesnut stallion, with white feet, was by far the best of the lot.

"You will take the chesnut, he is the only horse at all up to your weight," I said to Kit, who was a seventeen stoner at least.

"Thankee, mate," he replied, "tis kind of ye—yes, 'tis, to give up the best hoss; but I wish 'twar my ole spotted mustang. Don't kinder conseate them white feet, and that eye ain't clar grit, it ain't."

A few minutes were now wasted in endeavoring to persuade the artist to descend the tree and take the third horse; but, either on account of intense fear, or a conviction of the security of "cache," he still made no sign.—As the horsemen were now fast closing in upon us, and the footmen in the creek began to show themselves, as if with a design of cutting off our retreat, we were compelled unwillingly to leave this impracticable votary of "high art" to his fate. So, mounting our horses, and driving the third one before us, we put on the back trail.

"Hold hard, friend!" said my comrade, as the fresh young filly I rode stretched out in a slashing gallop. "If 'twer only twenty mile of good pariera from this to Van Noy Ferry that we've got to make to save our skins, we'd throw out yon varmints right smart; but reck'lect this pariera gives out in six miles more, and we've as many mile over bad mountain range afore we git down the open agin, that'll give those fine breeders goss!"

With horses well in hand we had ridden some little distance, when a loud whoop in our rear proclaimed that the Indians had reached our camp, but whether the demonstration proceeded from disappointment at the destruction of their anticipated prize, or rejoicing at the capture of our companion, the falling light did not permit us to judge. Soon we heard them again in pursuit. Darkness now set rapidly in, but riding as usual in Indian file, our horses accustomed for several weeks to follow the trail, picked it out with the greatest ease. As we came to the end of the prairie, I was delighted to see a full moon rising over the mountains, so that we should now have light to guide us in our flight—a great chance in our favor. Kit had relapsed into his accustomed taciturnity, and beyond paying great attention to the sounds in the rear, by which he seemed to regulate our pace, he betrayed no interest in anything. Knowing that all depended on our horses holding out, as we clattered up the first long mountain slope, I ranged alongside of him and examined their conditions. My own filly, though pretty heavily weighed, was as yet perfectly fresh, her stride was easy and elastic, and I felt she was warming well to her work. But an unpleasant sensation came over me as I noticed that Kit's chestnut was already bathed in a profuse sweat.

I was frequently, while in pursuit of my calling, thrown down to the ground without the slightest warning; and although [illegible] I yet despised the [illegible] and soon learned to look upon those who would render assistance or shelter me from danger as enemies who [illegible] prolong the existence of my miseries.
